PETER BLAKESLEY
WHAT A WONDERFUL WORLD

31 January - 19 March

'Art is in us all; we just have to develop it, practice it, and nurture it. As children we all have that capability, but we don't always follow the heart. Art is limitless, and this is perhaps why I continue to experiment with mediums, and not restrict myself to one type, or style, of painting. Light and suggestion have superseded realism in my paintings, and I continually strive to achieve this, and to reflect the natural beauty of Devon.'
www.peterblakesley.co.uk

SARAH HEBE TRUST THE PROCESS

21 March - 23 April

'Our learning begins with images before words. We think in pictures, and from those pictures we make connections and create stories. Stories can take us to any number of places, real or imagined, and the true beauty of them is that within each of us lies the potential for unlimited story telling. My passion and interest for inner landscapes and each person's unique stories, continues to fuel and weave their way through my work as an Art Psychotherapist and Personal Development Mentor. When each of us trusts and allows the creative process to begin, magic follows.'

ANTHONY HYSON PAINTINGS OLD AND NEW: A RETROSPECTIVE

25 April - 7 May

'Not having to earn my living as an artist means my work does not fall into any set category or theme. Wherever I am I make sketches and take photographs as an information gathering exercise. Image making is a human activity NOT a technique, it is a form of communication and only more recently a form of decoration. As an engineer, design is high on my list of priorities and composition, along with tone, come before colour. Retrospective exhibitions not only permit sales of the artist's work but enable him/her to review the outcome of many years of enjoyable endeavour.'
