Werewolves of Norfolk

For centuries, East Anglia's most famous supernatural resident has been described as a black dog. But what if we've been barking up the wrong tree?

Join Norfolk Folklore Society founders Stacia Briggs and Siofra Connor as they sink their teeth into one of folklore's most intriguing questions: could Black Shuck have more in common with a werewolf than anyone has realised?

Expect a fast-paced and frequently ridiculous journey through medieval werewolves, shape-shifters, black dogs, church legends, folklore, history and the strange tales that refuse to stay buried.

The Norfolk Folklore Society is a community of folklorists, magic-users, stone-spotters, paranormal investigators, cryptozoologists and curious souls with a cult podcast following and a mission to uncover the strange and uncanny heart of East Anglia.

Their work is a love letter to the folklore and hidden histories of the region, told with humour, curiosity and a healthy respect for things with fangs.

This special event will be recorded live for the internationally renowned Norfolk Folklore Society Podcast. Come for the folklore, leave questioning everything you thought you knew about Britain's most famous black dog.
